

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF MISSISSIPPI
GREENVILLE DIVISION

MARCIA PETTIS; et al.

PLAINTIFFS

vs.

No. 4:04CV295-D-B

AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL
GROUP, INC.; et al.

DEFENDANTS

ORDER DENYING MOTION FOR EXTENSION OF TIME

Presently before the court is the Defendants' motion for an extension of time to conduct remand-related discovery and respond to the Plaintiffs' pending motion to remand. Upon due consideration, the court finds that the motion should be denied; the Defendants' response to the Plaintiffs' motion shall be due on or before December 23, 2004.

The Plaintiffs in this action, which was removed to this court from the Circuit Court of Washington County, have filed a motion to remand. Rule 7.2(D) of the Uniform Local Rules provides that parties are granted ten days to respond to motions filed by the opposing party, but that extensions of time may be granted. In seeking to extend this deadline, the Defendants assert that the Plaintiffs have fraudulently joined at least one in-state defendant, and that they require additional time to respond in order to complete discovery relating to issues raised in the motion to remand.

In Smallwood v. Illinois Cent. R.R. Co., 385 F.3d 568, 573 (5th Cir. 2004), the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit reiterated that the test for fraudulent joinder is "whether the defendant has demonstrated that there is no possibility of recovery by the plaintiff against an in-state defendant, which stated differently means that there is no reasonable basis for the district court to predict that the plaintiff might be able to recover against an in-state defendant." Regarding the procedure for district courts to utilize in determining whether a "reasonable basis" for recovery exists in state court, the Fifth Circuit stated:

The court may conduct a Rule 12(b)(6)-type analysis, looking initially at the allegations of the complaint to determine whether the complaint states a claim under state law against the in-state defendant. Ordinarily, if a plaintiff can survive a Rule 12(b)(6) challenge, there is no improper joinder. That said, there are cases, hopefully few in number, in which a plaintiff has stated a claim, but has misstated or omitted facts that would properly justify joinder. Summary judgment is not proper based on a summary inquiry.

Smallwood, 385 F.3d at 573. The court went on to hold that only in the rare case where the pleadings must be pierced should remand related discovery be allowed, stating that:

[A] summary inquiry is appropriate only to identify the presence of discrete and undisputed facts that would preclude plaintiff's recovery against the in-state defendant. In this inquiry the motive or purpose of the joinder of in-state defendants is not relevant. We emphasize that any piercing of the pleadings should not entail substantial hearings. Discovery by the parties should not be allowed except on a tight judicial tether, sharply tailored to the question at hand, and only after a showing of its necessity. Attempting to proceed beyond this summary process carries a heavy risk of moving the court beyond jurisdiction and into a resolution of the merits, as distinguished from an analysis of the court's diversity jurisdiction by a simple and quick exposure of the chances of the claim against the in-state defendant alleged to be improperly joined. Indeed, the inability to make the requisite decision in a summary manner itself points to an inability of the removing party to carry its burden.

Id. at 574 (emphasis added).

After having reviewed the complaint and other pleadings in this matter, the court cannot conclude that this is one of the rare cases where the plaintiffs would survive a Rule 12(b)(6)-type inquiry only for it then to become necessary for the court to pierce the pleadings because the pleadings do not contain sufficient information to determine whether joinder was, in fact, proper. Thus, the court finds that the Defendants have not shown the necessity of remand-related discovery in this cause.

THEREFORE, it is hereby ORDERED that the Defendants' motion for an extension of time (docket entry 8) is DENIED; the Defendants shall file their response to the Plaintiffs' motion to remand by December 23, 2004.

SO ORDERED, this the 6th day of December 2004.
